Tee English papers, in their obituary notices of Count Tee English papers, in their obituary notices of Count Tee English papers, in their obituary notices of Count Cavour, speak almost universally in a highly eulogistic strain, and regard his death as a great natiocal calamity for Italy. The London Times says there is no need to conclude the game of Cavour ever, and not to be played out; there will be other Cavours raised up by his example, and before another year we shall see whether the example of the great Italian statesman is burled in the grave.

Mr. Condon had been formally presented at Guidhall with the freedom of the city of London, in acknowledgment of his services in connection with the commercial treaty between England and France. Mr. Cobden's reception was very enthusiastic. In his speech no dwelt upon the advantages likely to be conferred by the fresty of commerce, but deplored the vest warlike preparations of both countries as detrimental to the benefits which received would confer.

It was stated but the Emperor had sent an autograph letter to Victor emanuel on the death of Cayour, and that he had not unly revoked his edict against Prince Napoleon's visitiogitaly, but had sent a request to the Prince to go to Turk immediately.

The death of Count Cavour caused manifestations of the deepest regret at Turin. The wearing of mourning was general. All the stops and the Bourse were closed. The municipality had issued a proclamation urging upon the people the necessity of firmness and constancy. The King visited Cavour on the evening before his death. The official Gazette announces that Cavour's last moments were perfectly peaceful, and that in dying he expressed the profund faith it has activated if Italy the stop is said to have sent for Baron Richeoli and Signer Ratavzi.

Signer Ratazzi.

At the reopening of the Italian Chamber, on the 6th of June, the Fresident announced the death of Count Cavour amid profound expressions of grief on the part of the Assembly. He pointed to the great loss Italy had sustained, and described the signal services rendered by Count Cavour.

Eignor Ratazzi then said:—
The Chamber should purticipate in the Italian national mourning by susponding the sittings for three days. We are deeply affected by the misfortune which has deprived us or the wisdom of so illustrious a statesman. We must not, however, allow ourselves to be discouraged, nor quit the path which we have hitherto followed. He whom we now mourn expressed in his last moments his unshaken faith in the future of Italy, showing himself convinced that the principles of unity and independence would fully triumph. We firmly hold this faith. Agreeing among ourselves, let us sincerely rally around the throne of a valiant and loyal prince, and we shall then be able to attain the end to which, thanks to our tenacity, we are happily so near.

The Senate had taken the same resolution.

The obsequies of Count Cavour were performed on the 7th June, with almost royal pomp. All the great bodies of State, and in fact the whole population of furin, took part. All the houses were draped with black.

The Nationalities of the 8th of June states that Garibaldi was rather seriously ill at Caprera. It is also stated that the Pope was unwell and had slight symptoms of fever.

The Opinione, of Turin, says the King had entrusted Baron Ricasoli with the formation of a ministry. The Baron was, however, conduced to his bed, owing to the deep impression made upon him by the death of Cavour.

Poland.

The Case says:—
The Pope has sent an autograph letter to the Emperor of Russia, rejecting his request to issue a Papal Bull against the manifestation of the Poles, and threatening the Emperor with the judgment of God on account of his persecution of the Christian church and the slaughter of unarmed people. The Case supposes that in consequence of this letter the Emperor of Russia will recall Count Kisseleff from Rome. The remains of Prince Gortchakoff were to be removed of Sebastopol.
